THERE'S many a thing that will make us pause.
We're after all that's new,
But when you give us Old Santa Claus,
Why, that old boy will do.

We are requested to invite the public in general to attend the Christmas tree at the Methodist Church to-night.

The two negroes hanged Friday at Danville, Ky., and Bristol, Va., were doubtless resigned to the material climatic change.

Eggs have been very scarce and hard to get. Saturday they were selling for 40 cents a dozen. As a consequence, eggs will not be so plentiful to-morrow.

The Kentucky University Mandolin, Guitar and Glee Club will appear at the Grand Opera House, in this city, on the evening of December 31, under the auspices of the Christian Church. Dr. Frank Fithian and a chorus of picked voices will render the choruses given at the Elks' Memorial Services in this city recently.

THOUSANDS of dollars are thrown away annually in buying worthless Christmas presents. Every present that is bought from J. T. Hinton will be appreciated for its worth by the receiver. Cut prices to-day and to-morrow.

The attraction booked for the Grand, in this city, on next Thursday night, will be Wm. A. Brady's production of Marie Correll's famous work, "The Sorrows of Satan." To go into detail in regard to this attraction is unnecessary, as it has made a favorable impression everywhere. The company should be welcomed by a packed house.

J. T. HINTON'S is the place for the tardy Christmas buyer. He will always find a full stock to select from.

MR. S. L. MEYERS, the Lexington insurance man, who disappeared from home and friends on the 10th of December, was located Saturday at Lewisburg, Mason county, and was returned to Lexington, yesterday. He has been suffering from a mental strain.

LATER.—He escaped through a transom, at Maysville, and is at large.

Marriage Consummated After Embarrassing Adventures.

A special to the Lexington Herald, says: "Mr. Jason Fields, of Hazard, Ky., and Miss Nora Patterson, of Millersburg, this county, had an exciting time getting married Friday. Miss Patterson has been doing missionary work in the mountains of Kentucky and became acquainted with Mr. Fields, who fell in love with her. The young lady visited her home in Millersburg and her fiancé came down on last Thursday, prepared for the wedding which was to have taken place in Lexington on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. They boarded the train at Millersburg with Rev. C. C. Fisher, who was to perform the ceremony and a number of friends and relatives. When they called upon County Clerk Chinn, at Lexington, for license the groom inadvertently acknowledged that he was only nineteen years of age, and gave his intended bride's age as twenty-three. Both of these statements being said to be truthful, the Clerk refused the license because the young man was not armed with a written permit from his parents or guardians. It seems that Mr. Fields' mother had told him to write a note to the Clerk and sign her name to it, which the young man had neglected to do. He then called upon Mr. Fizer, of Lexington, a relative of the bride, who wrote the note, addressing it to the Clerk of Bourbon county, to which Mr. Fields' father's mother's name.

"Coming to Paris, the license was issued by Clerk Ed Paton and they went on to Millersburg at 6:35. All of the passengers learned somehow that there was a wedding in prospect, and as the parties had the license, and the minister was present, they waited upon the young couple through a committee and begged that the ceremony be performed enroute from Paris to Millersburg. This was declined amid a profusion of blushes on the part of the bride, and a lot of coughs upon the part of the groom. The father of the bride met the couple at the station, thinking they had married in Lexington, and was very much surprised when they told him they were still young and single. They then adjourned to the Millersburg Female College, followed by fully one-half of the population, and there the ceremony was performed by Prof. Fisher, to the accompaniment of music from an organ performed over by Miss May Williams."
